Duality consists of two collections – Dreamscapes and Morgue – which exist at opposite ends of my spectrum of interest.

The dreamscape pictures are a luminous expression of pure escapism, an attempt to re-create and capture vivid daydreaming. Each picture is presented on it's own terms; differentiated from the surrounding environment, floating in front of the wall like a fantastical trompe l'œil, a window to the ephemeral world it seeks to capture.

Morgue is opposite, a purely realist documentary project. Concerned with the here and now, with memory, with the human condition. It is confrontational, it is real. The pictures work together, repetition bringing strength and power; they stare across the gallery at dreamscapes, snapping at the heels of the escapist fantasy, trying to drive these dreams from existence.

And in the middle we exist, forever torn between these extremes.
